

{Policy}: Cancel or Change Ryanair Flight?

According to official guidance from Ryanair Help Centre, there is a clear difference between cancelling a booking and changing a flight. Ryanair tickets are generally non-refundable, and voluntary cancellations do not provide a refund if the flight operates as scheduled.

If you decide not to travel, the airline does not require you to formally cancel your booking. However, you will not receive a refund unless specific conditions apply, such as when the airline cancels the flight or fails to operate it as scheduled.

Instead of cancelling, Ryanair strongly facilitates flight changes through its "Manage My Booking" system. Passengers can log in online or via the app, select their booking, and choose the "Change your flight" option to modify travel details such as date, time, or route.

To cancel or change your Ryanair flight, you must access the official Manage My Booking process. Passengers can log into Find Your Booking section, using their booking reference number.

The system requires the lead passenger surname entry, secure login verification. After booking confirmation, an email confirmation is sent, containing your booking details.

All changes or cancellations must be requested online directly, via the official website access. Passengers must review available options under policy rules, before proceeding with any request action. Online check-in is available based on official timing rules, typically within 48 hours before departure.

All updates must be completed through your booking login, using valid credentials. Passengers should ensure their contact email details remain correct, for receiving important updates. Every request must follow official Ryanair policy
